Visit to Miserden Motte and Baily Castle 18th July 2026

Visit Report

Introduction

This was our third outing this year, and 10 of us managed to meet up on a warm, and sunny afternoon.

After a pleasant walk through some pastures, we entered the woodland area in which the motte and baily castle is located. When we drew near the actual site we stopped and asked for permissions to enter, and words were offered to the Guardians of the site. Following this several people immediately sensed a change in the atmosphere and a shift in energy.

Climbing up a slope we were soon confronted with the task ahead, as the mound on which the motte and baily would have been located could only be reached by first transversing a deep moat with steep sides, and then by climbing up a steep slope onto the top of the mound itself.

The following report summarises the main observations of the group based on feedback received so far.

Findings and Comments

In the Vicinity of the Motte and Bailey – Comments made

- I felt as if we were on a processional pathway, and at one point I felt there would have been a statue or flaming torch to mark the way.
- The site itself was very peaceful and believed to be for healing.
- There were Guardians present, also nature spirits.
- The trees were beautiful and I connected to one venerable specimen, a Sycamore, which felt remote but not in a detached way, more in its connectedness to the wider space and other species of tree. Very beautiful and settling.
- I sensed that humans had been here for between 4000 and 5000 years.
- Sitting on a fallen tree and absorbing the presence, everything seemed bright and serenely alive. I looked across at a tall tree whose branches were cascading down from top to bottom. Quite suddenly a shaft of sunlight turned it's leaves to flowing sliver. It lasted for a few minutes before the light moved on but left an impression of a shining life.
- On the path on the way towards the actual moat and mound there was a powerful energy spot, a clockwise energy spiral. This was picked up by two people but not investigated further.

On the Motte and Bailey Mound

- At the far left of the nearside, there was a clockwise energy spiral. I sensed that area was where the ancients would greet the sun.
- At a central area there was a shallow hollow covered in nettles, grid reference SO94401 09246. Here there was a clockwise spiral of energy with indication of water flowing in N – S direction. Also, four energy lines crossing in N – S, E – W, NW – SE and SW – NE directions. Energy dowsed to be Yang energy.
- Southeast of above location, grid reference SO 94382 09252, there was another energy spiral, but this time dowsed to be Ying energy. Also, with four energy lines passing in the cardinal point directions as above.
- A further spiral of energy located not far from the second location, grid reference SO. 94402 09258. Again, four energy lines located in cardinal directions.
- At another area covered with nettles, one of the party reported feeling an unpleasant presence, as though being watched, and felt that they were being asked to leave which they did. Another of the party picked up negative energy at this spot and gave it healing which improved the energy.
- At another area also covered in nettles two people picked up further negative energy. One recounted, with my eyes closed I seemed to see agonised faces. I gave healing, and on mentioning love, I saw a red heart pierce the ground and a spirit fly free in great joy. The second person independently reported that they felt there was a being who needed to pass over to the light and saw a woman released to the light.

Conclusions

This was a magical place to be with intense energies pervading the site. The comments above show the wide range of experiences that different people picked up whilst we were there. It is also clear that we were just scratching the surface in understanding the true nature of the place. There is clearly more work to be done, not just in mapping the energy footprint, but in understanding how the different aspects relate to each other. There was also the feeling that perhaps there were other trapped entities to be released as well as more healing to be done. Then there is the question on how the site relates to the other sites we have so far visited, as so many seem to be energetically related.

Overall, we must conclude that a return visit should be high on our list of places to return to. However, in the meantime I remain convinced that we left the site in a higher state of positive energy and harmony than before our visit.

Postscript

I measured the energy of the Miserden site in Bovis units prior to our visit and obtained a reading of 9K units (the energy of a person in good health). After our visit I obtained a reading of 29K units (Star Sirius). This information needs to be corroborated.
